

Time and the Meaning of Life

What is the meaning of life? Why ask? Do you think you will get an answer? Who or what can you ask that can give you an answer? I have no useful answer to give you in your quest, only a guess no more valid than anyone elses speculations. To answer this question we have to implicitly assume that for us to have meaning we would probably also require a purpose. I suppose you could look to religious organizations that purport to answer this question especially if you give them money. At least you would have some sort of answer about the meaning or purpose of money if not life in general. My fallback position is the following:

You see, there is no more purpose or meaning in the world than you put into it.

Hans Reichenbach

As far as time is concerned, clocks and therefore time are at best just a toy to monitor your progress or lack thereof in a universe where meaning and purpose are ideas to fill in the voids between dreams.
